

GASAI

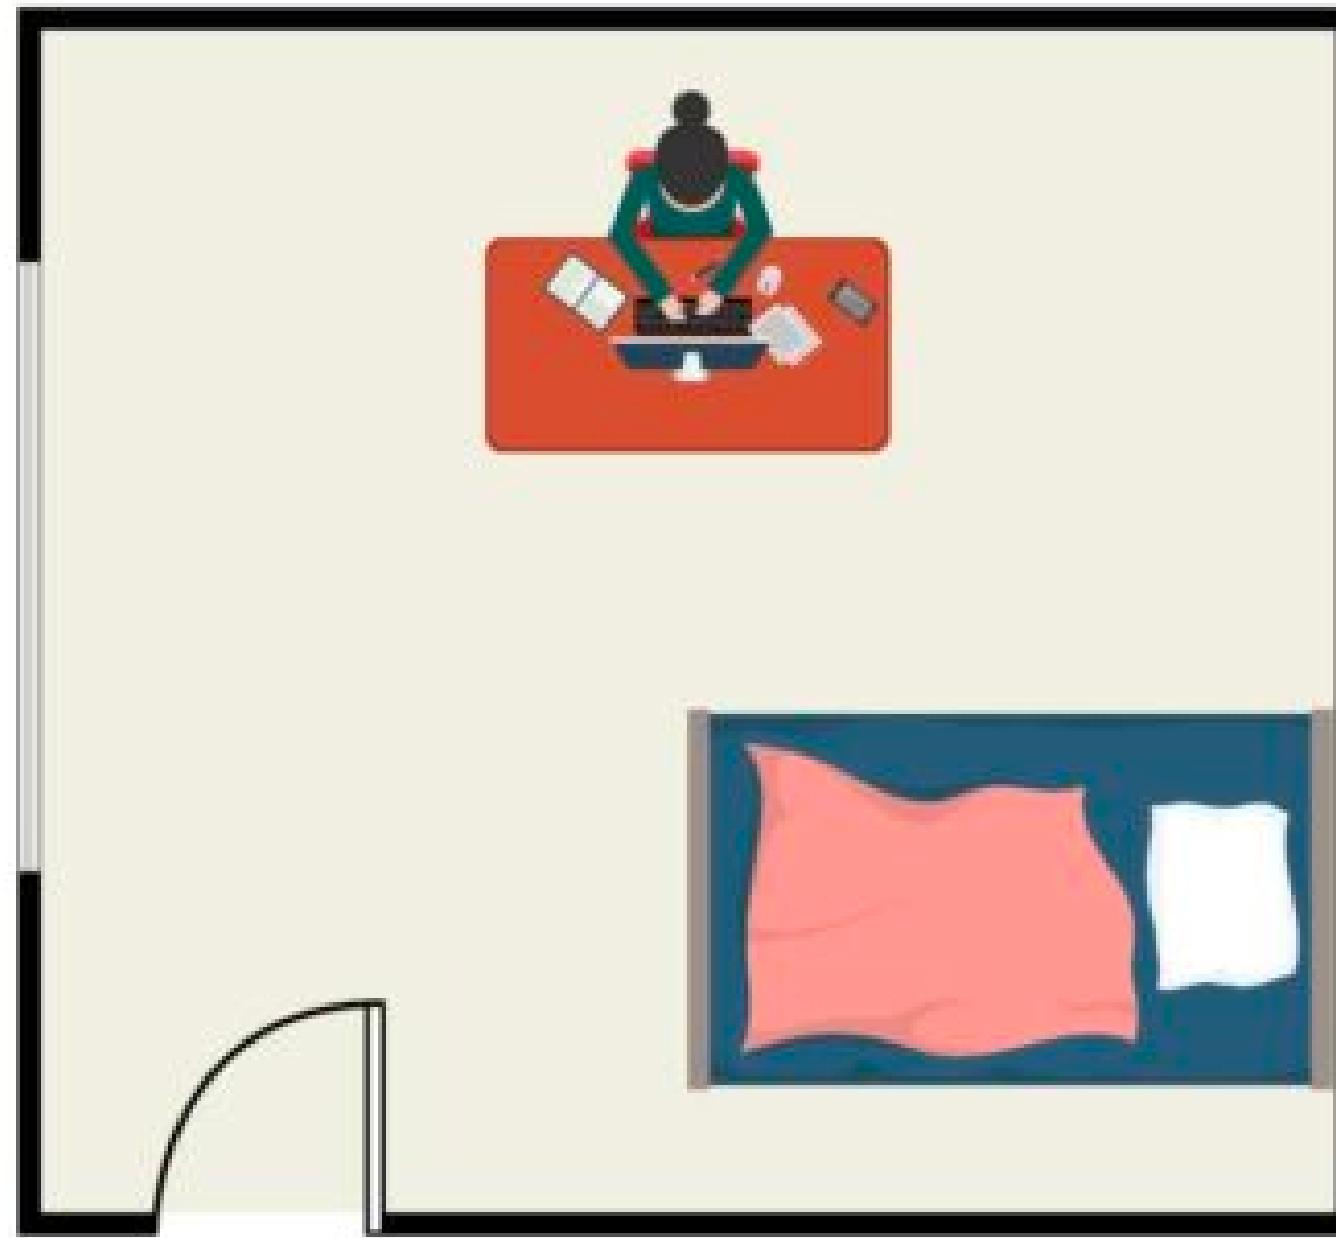

GASAI

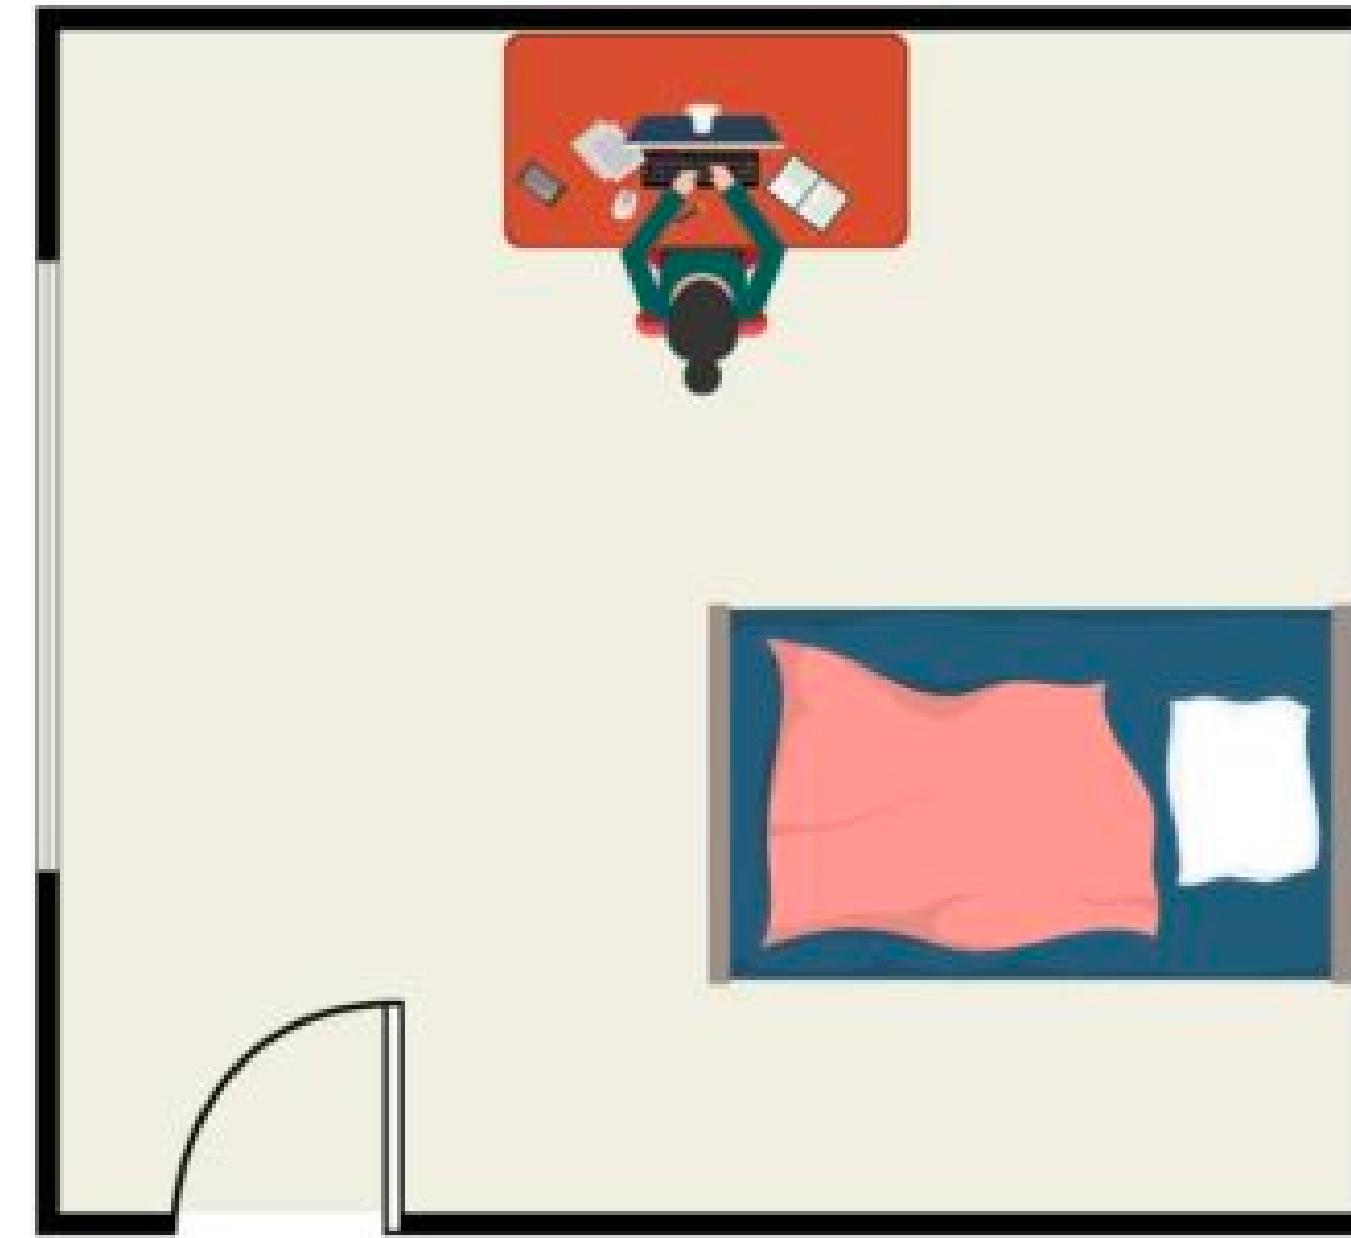

Desk is diagonal to the door with view of the room

Desk faces away from the door and stares at a wall

Feng Shui

風水

Survey
Survey
Survey

Most of Them

Most of Them

- Believe (86%)

Most of Them

- Believe (86%)
- Clueless (61%)

Most of Them

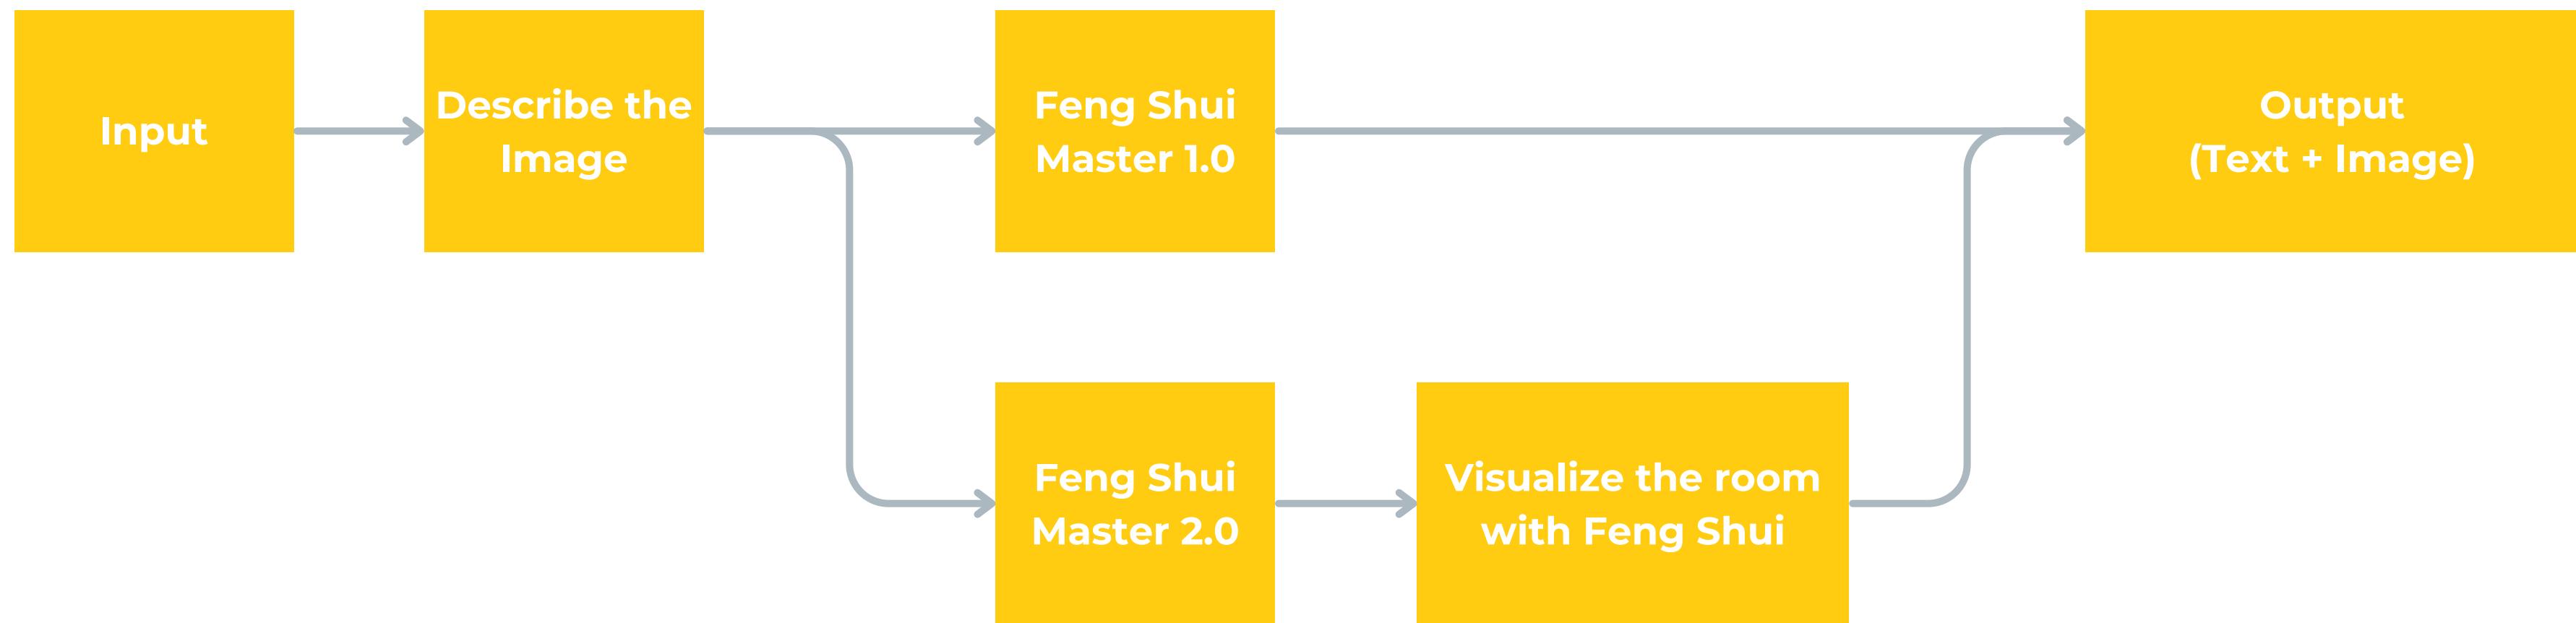

- Believe (86%)
- Clueless (61%)
- Interested (79%)

FengShuiGPT

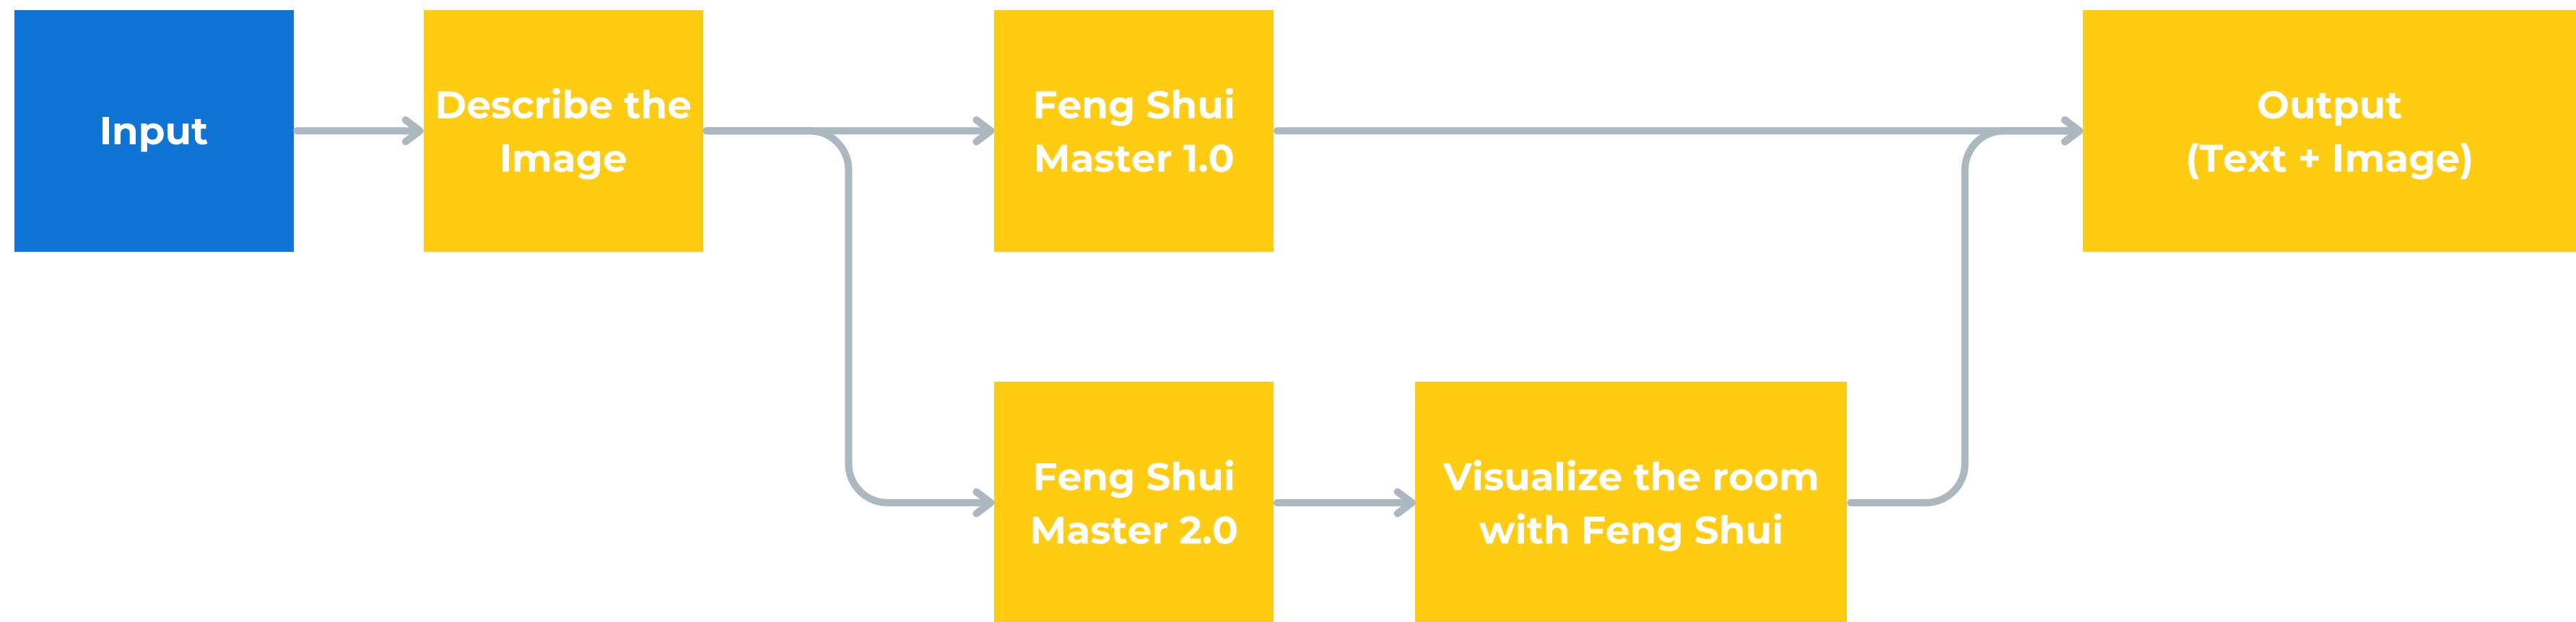

How it Works

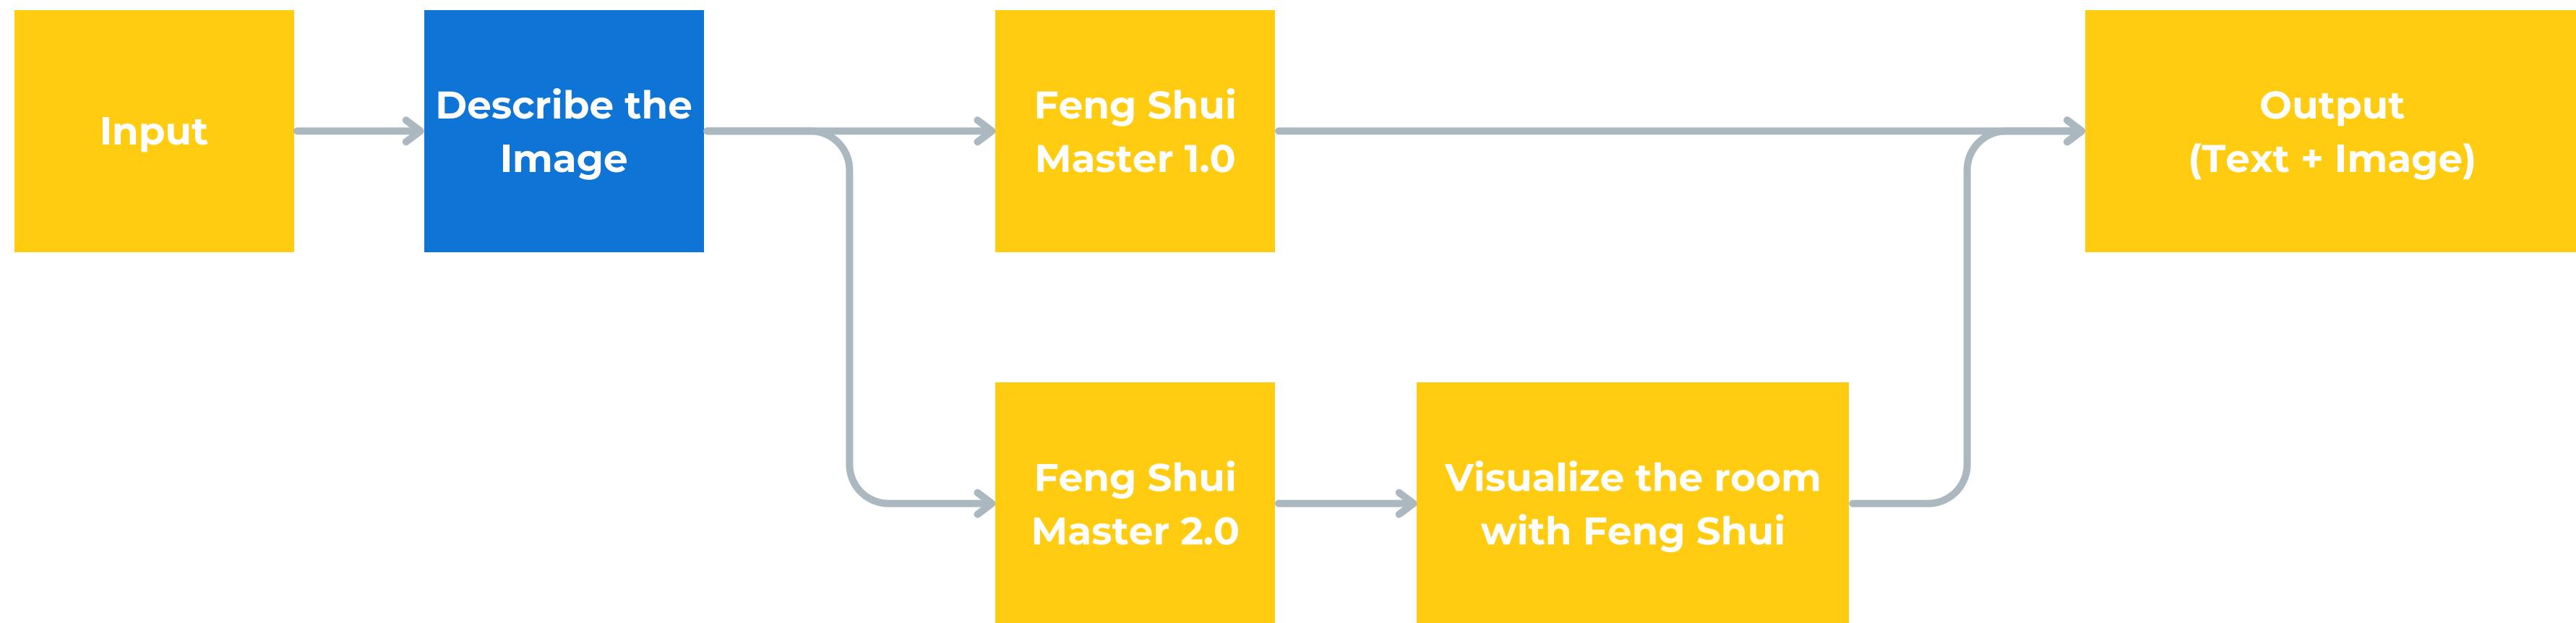

How it Works

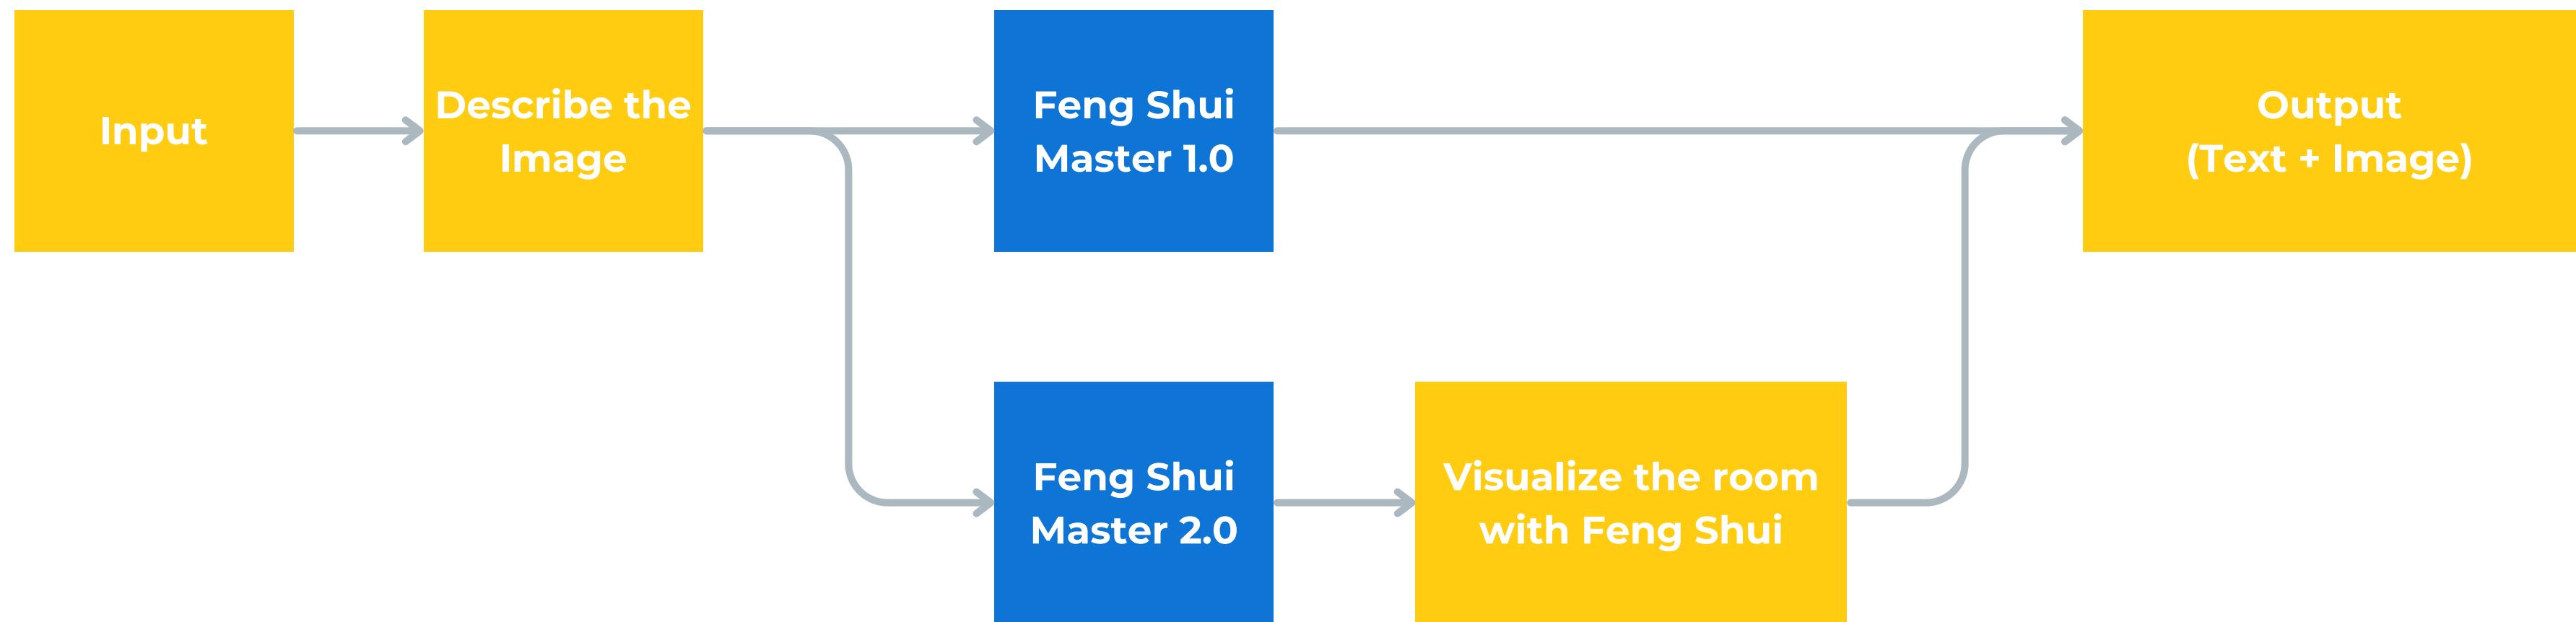

How it Works

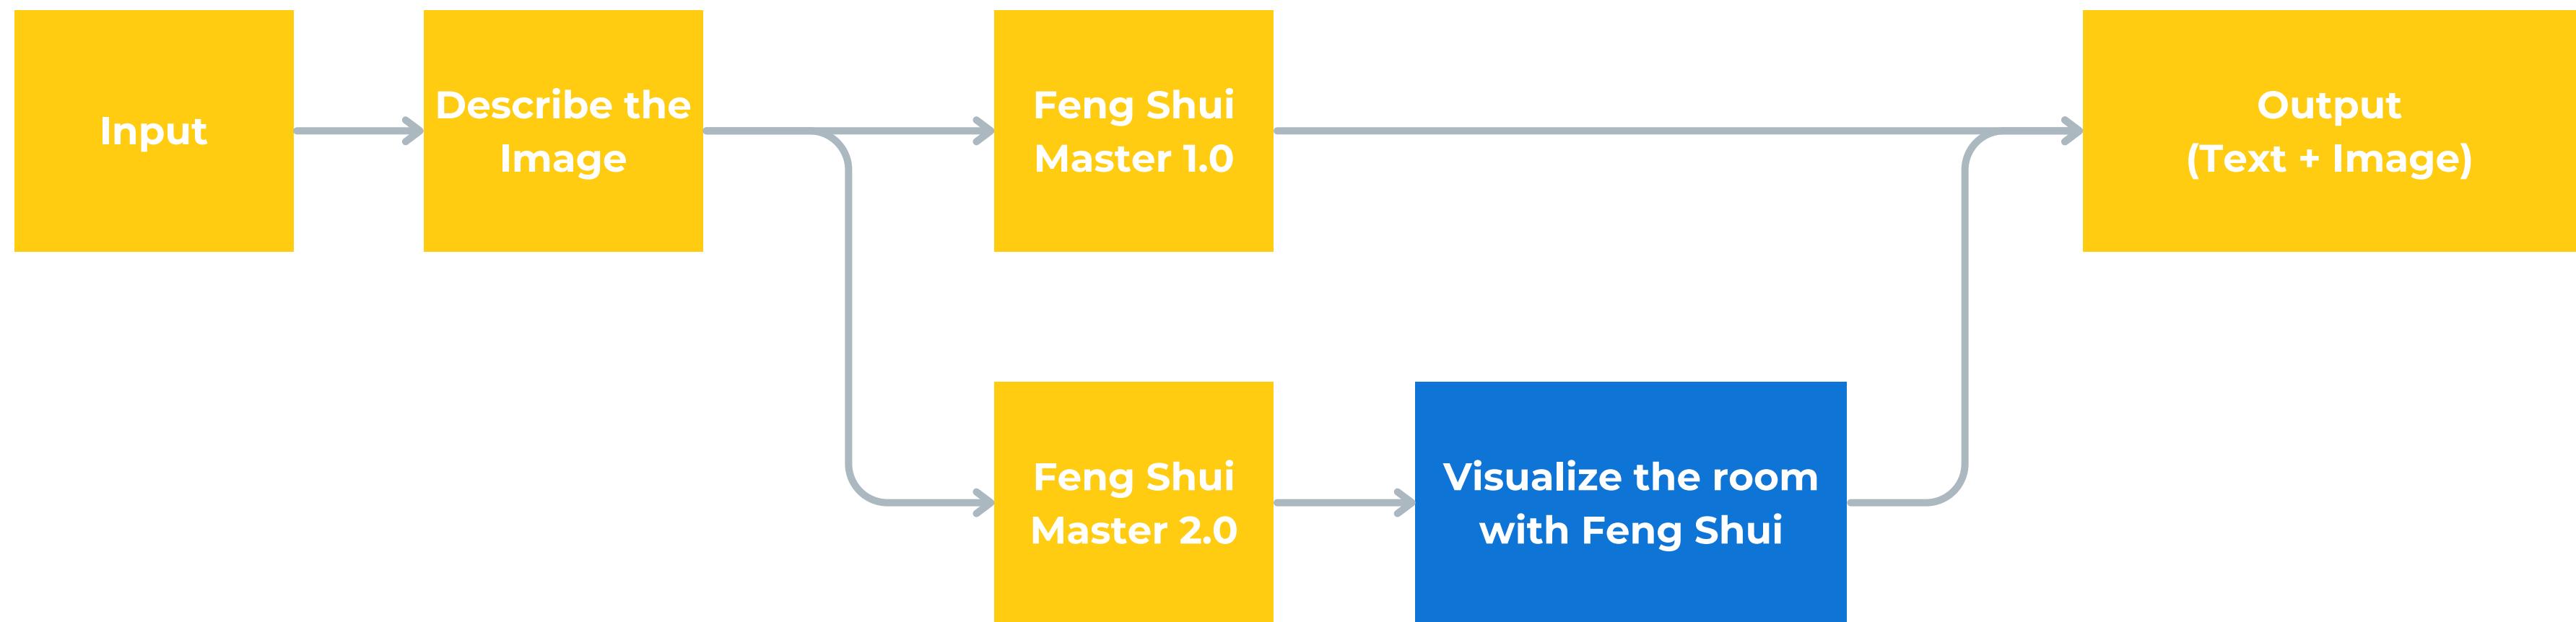

How it Works

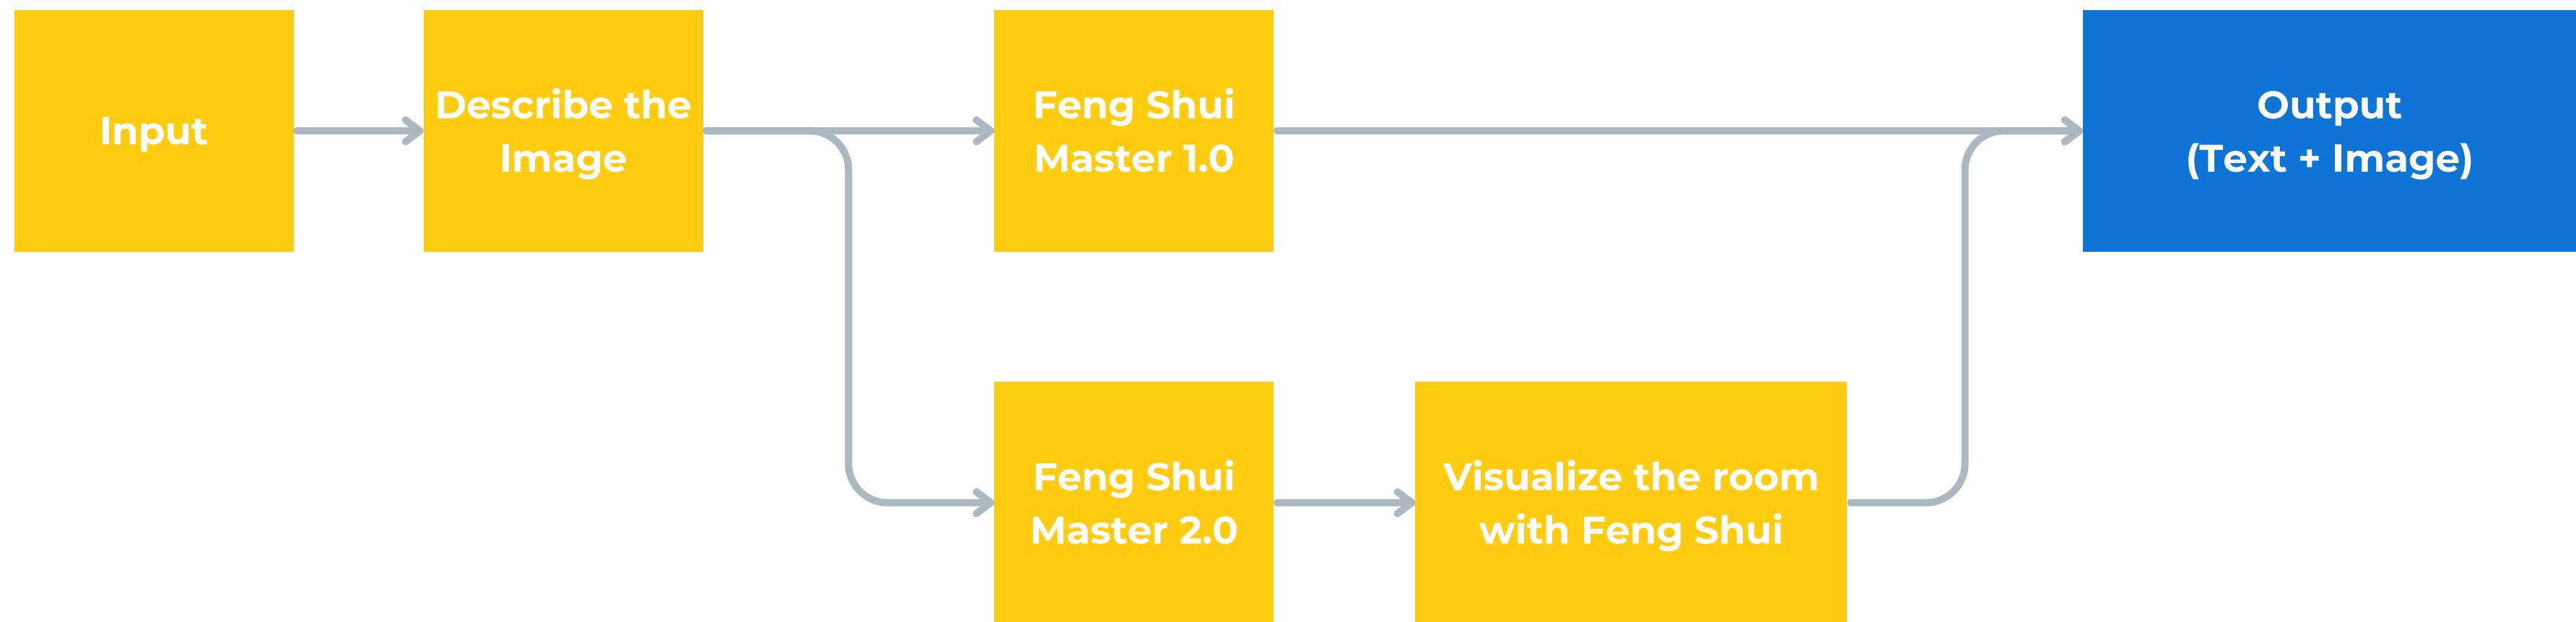

How it Works

How it Works

How it Works

Input

Output

Suggestion and Tips

As a feng shui master, I would recommend rearranging the furniture in the bedroom to improve the flow of positive energy (chi) in the space. Here's a suggested layout:

- Move the bed to the right side of the room, away from the door and closer to the window. This will allow the occupant to have a better view of the outside world and take advantage of natural light.
- Place the dresser against the wall opposite the bed, creating a clear path between the two pieces of furniture. This will facilitate the flow of chi and create a sense of balance in the room.
- Position the laptop on a small table or desk placed at an angle to the dresser, creating a workspace that is separate from the sleeping area.
- Move the closet to the left side of the room, next to the bed. This will create a more harmonious relationship between the bed and the closet, as they will now be positioned in a commanding position, with the bed taking center stage.
- Consider adding plants or artwork to the walls to enhance the energy of the space

Visualisation

Before vs After

Before vs After

Our Expectations

- Introduce Feng Shui to the mass market
- Improve life quality
- Help interior designer to use Feng Shui

Principles

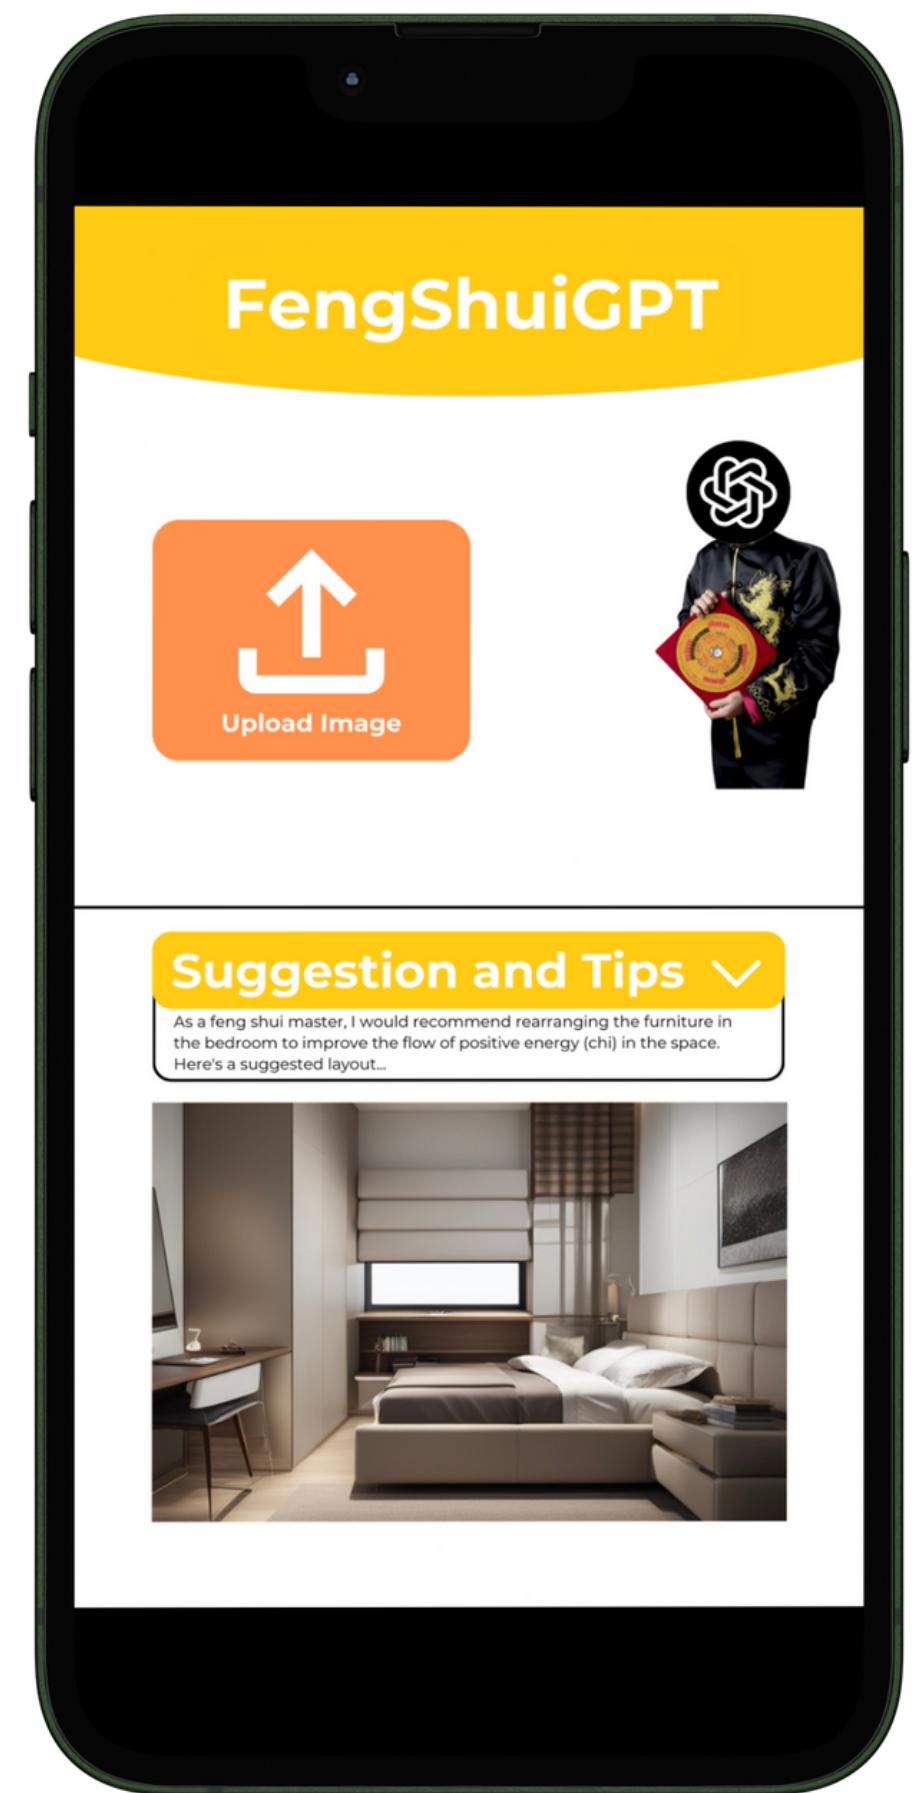

What's Next?

What's Next?

Run on Website!

Thank You!

Questions?